A GOOD COMPLEXION.—Every young person should be impressed with the truth that a good complexion depends upon pure blood and a healthy condition of the stomach. It cannot be secured by the use of outward applications. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives a good complexion and a fair skin because it makes the blood rich and pure and regulates the stomach. Pimples, blackheads and all similar eruptions which so disfigure the face are promptly removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla which it thoroughly eradicates all foul taints from the blood.

PLEASANT RECEPTION

Mrs. J. C. Hough threw open her spacious home on Baldwin street Monday evening for a reception tendered by her to the members of the Vermont chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and invited guests.

The interior of the house was prettily decorated with hellebore and fleur-de-lis, the national flower of France, and the guests assembled each with a sprig of hellebore. In the front parlor the State flag was gracefully draped amid banks of hellebore and cut flowers. The guests were received by Mrs. Hough and Mrs. C. H. More, regent of the local chapter. Music was furnished by G. H. Wilder, pianist, and J. E. St. Clair, clarinetist.

ORANGE COUNTY SENATORSHIP.

Editor Watchman and Journal.—Since the organization of the Republican party, in 1850, it has been the invariable custom of the Republicans of Orange County to hold conventions to nominate their senatorial candidates according to residence, so that the county is divided into districts into which the county is divided, and each district elects a senator. This makes an equitable arrangement, so far as the two sides of the county are concerned, and having nearly the same number of towns, and about the same population as the other.

The same equitable principle accords to the two sides of the county, and in right, since in awhile, to have one of its own citizens nominated to this honorable position. Pending this arrangement the town of Randolph has been remarkably well able to take care of herself, having secured nine Senators within forty-five years, about one every five years, and even since 1850, when biennial elections began, each incumbent has had more than one year's service, she has had four Senators, while the town of Washington has not been allowed to send a Senator. A. White was elected in 1870, and this, too, was a Republican, in the district has been given the office from one to three terms. Yet the Herald and News of Randolph claims that Randolph is now entitled to that honor, and that it has not been given the office since the election of 1892. But how much stronger is the claim of Washington which has not received it since the election of 1870.

In this situation it is very gratifying to the Republicans of Orange County that so good a man as Hon. Chester Dickey allows the use of his name as a candidate for the position of county Senator. He is well and favorably known throughout the county as a worthy citizen and very capable man. Not only is his history beyond question, but the fiber of his Republicanism is as tough and unyielding as the strength of his personal character. His party fealty is not a hollow growth, nurtured by the incumbency of important offices, whose joint tenure is longer than a scant period of party membership. If, then, the Republican voters of Orange County but do their duty, and a free, full and fair expression is given through the primaries, unpacked and unthought by mercenary means, then the town of Washington will, at last, receive its long-delayed need of party justice, and Chester Dickey, an able, honest and unquestionable Republican, will be chosen the west side Senator from Orange County. THREE SCORE AND TEN.

Col. Fred E. Smith at the Mortal Time Limit. A Life Filled With Many Activities. An Honorable and Successful Career, Relieved by the Amenities of Life. Still in the Harness and Keeping the Tugs Taut.

Full of honors and possessed of the high esteem of all who know him, Col. Fred E. Smith, president of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, will, on Monday, quietly celebrate the seventieth anniversary of his birth. A brief sketch of Col. Smith's varied and successful business career is of interest at this time.

Col. Smith was born in Northfield, June 11, 1830. After serving an apprenticeship as clerk in the store of Loomis & Camp of Montpelier he embarked in business for himself, purchasing the S. K. Collins drug store in 1853. He continued in this business until the breaking out of the civil war. In November 1861 he was appointed quartermaster of the Eighth Vermont regiment, and served in that organization as commissary of subsistence on the staff of Gen. Godfrey Westcott in the Department of the Gulf until 1863. He returned to Montpelier at the close of his military service and this city has since been his home, with the exception of two years' residence in New York.

Since the war Col. Smith has ever been active in military organizations. For many years he has been secretary of the Vermont Officers' Reunion Society, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and of the Local Legion. He has been an officer and director in many corporations and business enterprises, where his sound judgment and peculiar capacity for varied affairs have been in demand. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Montpelier in 1883, has been a director continuously from that time and for many years vice-president of the institution. In that year, also, he was chosen a director in the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and in 1891 was made a member of the executive committee. He is a trustee of the Washington County Grammar School and of the Vermont University. Colonel Smith was Senator from Washington county in the Legislature of 1886, and a delegate at large to the Republican National Convention in 1892. For many years he has been a warden and active worker in Christ Church of this city.

But it is in connection with the Vermont Mutual Fire Insurance Company that Colonel Smith's name is best known, most widely known. In 1875 he was elected a director of this company, to succeed Daniel Baldwin, a former president. In 1876 he was elected vice president. He has served continuously since, either as vice-president or president. He was first elected president of this company in 1887, serving as such for four years. After a brief retirement as the official head he was again in 1893 elected to the presidency of the company, and has since been successfully re-elected. The following administration of the business of the company has been thoroughly systematized, the relations of policy holders and the company have become mutually close and satisfactory, the true principles of fire insurance in all its departments have come better understood, and the "Old Mutual" has been advanced to a high degree of prosperity.

It has been said that Col. Smith's sound judgment and peculiar capacity for diverse business affairs have made him a leading agent in many enterprises locally and elsewhere. Men who have been associated with him in business management understand the full import of this observation. Among individuals in control over a property enterprise or an industrial concern, much discussion of ways and means, the wisdom or unwisdom of this proposition or that. Col. Smith is a listener. He weighs carefully and decides with deliberation. When he has made up and declared his judgment it has a morally been recognized as the wisest thing to accept and has received the assent of his associates. Col. Smith is conciliatory, his opinions are advanced with becoming modesty, his regard for the judgment of others reconciling opposition. It is not always wholly convinced by him, but he is always ready to listen.

Outside of business affairs, Col. Smith's uniform courtesy, a kindly nature and genial good fellowship, his unqualified right to that good old-fashioned title of gentleman, have made him friends whose name is legion, whose habitation is the State and country at large, who will give him hearty greetings on his arrival at the mutual fire insurance company, and who will pray that in his case the Scriptural statute of limitations may be long extended, with no dimming of the eye or abatement of mental force.
